South America, particularly colombia, Ecuador, Brazil and Venezuela, and various new markets in the American colonies, as well as Australia and the Malay peninsula, were described by Dr. Julius Klein, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domes-Commerce of the Commerce De partment as offering an encouraging field for export development.

Mr. Coolldge's Address

was as follows: Ladies and Gentlemen

If one were casting about for an industry whose story would most ommerce that has gone to make up civilization, I am not sure that he could do better than investigate the industry which is here represented.

It would begin with our first fore-fathers pleating together their first rude garments, and it would keep step unfailingly with development from the day of fig leaves to the latest creation of the loom. Man may have originated in the tropical areas, but it was the invention of clothes that made it possible for him to live in those more rigorous climates that have proved most encouraging to his progress.

Thomas Carlyle, in his "Sartor Resartus," a book altogether too little known and read in these days, projected a profound philosophy of human relationships from a study of the clothing of mankind. So I am sure it will be pardonable if I set dustrial and economic structure by or materials wherewith the of mankind are clothed.

and delicate fabrics hand-wrought from the fibers of cotton. Building Textile Industry

For many generations these were e most prized products of the weaver's craft. The desire for them, inore as articles of luxury and adornment than for everyday use, was one of the incentives which led, hold navigators into those high ad-ventures that added new continents

Today, thanks to that instinct for industrial short cuts which has made part of the western world a wilderness of machinery, most of the finer textiles are produced in the western countries, while India imports most of its enormous requirements of cotton fabrics. That one detail may be taken as epitomizing the story of several generations of economic revolution on a world scale. The path of progress has fol-

ithin the cycle of this worldwide revolution smaller and more intense revolutions have been constantly in progress. There are sound and accepted historians who date the beginning of the modern phase of the industrial epoch from the inention of power-driven machinery textile making.

Rapidity of Change

How rapid have been some of these changes within your industry is suggested by an experience of my own a few evenings ago. In the course of some researches preliminary to these remarks I found myself needng a somewhat more accurate defiinition of a certain trade term, no doubt thoroughly familiar to all of you, than I was able to command. though the poll was not so heavy in Belfast as in 1821, in the border counties the appeal on the boundary question found the strongest support.

The State Co-operative Marketing Association also had sales to its credit last year of over $500,000, and has handled eggs, apples and wool profitably. In Sullivan County a live-stock shipping association has been formed, and in Hillsboro County an apple packing plant. The co-operative purchase of farm machin-ery has also been successfully tried out in several places. Farmers are finding that they can accomplish material savings by working to-gether instead of separately. At the same time efficiency in the operation of the individual farm has

Two great difficulties with the average New Hampshire farm have been the small volume of business and the large amount of hand-labor. These have resulted in a high cost of production and consequent failure to compete with other regions. There has been perhaps no more important gain in the last decade than in the generally circulated conception of a well organized unit; Poultrymen have set the standard of at least 1000 hens per man; orchardists, 500 permanent apple trees; dairymen, ten cows; potato growers, five to ten acres.

Demonstrations, publicity and tours have emphasized the importance of substituting machine for hand labor, and of a high production per man. Instances of the expendi-ture of 400 man-hours per acre of potatoes have been found, and con-trasted with other examples of only a little more than 100 man-hours per

AMHERST, Mass., April 7 (Special)—With a scarcity of spruce facing the pulp, paper and lumber industries, it is important to avoid Saxony's mistake of overworking the forest soil, says S. T. The station, with its research council of prominent timberland owners, foresters, heads of schools and directors of agricultural experiment stations, is undertaking certain studies in this little explored field. # SOLUTION OF WORLD PROBLEMS SEEN IN TELEPHONE AND MOTOR Sales Executives Open

President of Automobile Company Says They Will Break Barriers of Custom and Open Channels of Understanding

That the solution of the whole Eu- | in the business of transportation and ropean problem will be brought about by the introduction of 2,000,000 Fords and 2,000,000 telephones, was the assertion of Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car Company, addressing the assembly luncheon of the Boston Chamber of Commerce this afternoon.

Talking on "The Greatest Business in the World." Mr. Jordan said that answer to the question, will be the final solution for the European problem," was the introduction of these instruments of transportation and communication which would "break down the barriers of language, custom and religion, and open the channels of commerce and understanding."

Referring to the fundamentals of the automobile business, he said three things determine the economic and cultural progress of the worldtransportation, agriculture, and communication. Tracing the history of transportation, he said America started on a period of development which has made her the dominant Nation of the world, when the Bessemer process of making cheap steel in volume was invented and the "invention of the automobile.'

About the next great development that will bring about a new industrial era, Mr. Jordan said:

I believe that Mr. Atterbury of the Pennsylvania Railroad was right when he said: "There can be produced with the cheap water power at Muscle Shoals a kind of metal hat will revolutionize the transport tation of the world. This will be aluminum alloy, cheaper, lighter, and better than steel."

and better than steel."
With aluminum now at 27 cents a pound, and the price of bar steel at 2½ cents, imagine the saving that could be made in the weight of cars and the economies of transportation if, a new and better metal could be produced to real produced to produced to sell near the price of

Predicts New Era in Germany It is widely known that the great industrial progress of Germany be-gan with the invention of the open hearth process of treating the low grade ores available in Germany. Unless the men who are in control of the development of aluminum alloys in America see the light. I would not be surprised to witness onother great era of industrial development in Germany based upon the devel-opment of a metal such as I have communication, the business of agriculture has been retarded because agriculture has not yet made a com plete transition from man and horse power to machine power.

Ford, who is producing several hundred tractors every day, knows that with modern farm implements yet undeveloped, agriculture will be volutionized and with a reduction in the cost per ton mile of trans-portation, and with the development of trucks and automobiles, the farmer will have the same opportunity to compete in the markets of the world at a profit to himself as manufacturers of other American products now enjoy.

While transportation and com munication have been going ahead at a rapid rate, the business of agriculture has been lagging behind.

Some politicians have been trying to convince the farmers of the mid-dle west that what they need is legislation. Ford knows that what they need is modern implements, and the farmers of the northwest have learned that what they need more than anything else was to get out of politics and get back to farm-

"They Won't Walk"

The saturation point will be reached when every civilized human being in the world has some indi-vidual means of transportation and none ever wears out. As one man said. "They won't walk."

The population of the earth has doubled in the last 90 years. Today it is estimated at 1,747,000,000. The increase in population in the United States has averaged nearly 4000 persons each day. The population of the United States has been doubling every 30 years during the last cen-

If this rate increases we will have 700,000,000 people in less than 100 years. Herbert Hoover says that super power will save 30,000,000 tons of coal a year. Centralized distribution of light and heat has already been achieved. The ice man, the gas man and the milk man will disappear. In their places will be super organizations for the distribution of heat and refrigeration.

The super automobile of the fu-ure will sell for a small sum. Practically every man, woman and child may have one. If you think funda-mentally about the automobile in-dustry you will discover that it is now in what I call the fourth stage. reat era of industrial development in Germany based upon the development of a metal such as I have lescribed.

criticize the American policy of con-serving first opportunity in our home market for our own producers. We can hardly expect that such a program would be popular with those who find themselves placed at a dis-advantage in the greatest market of advantage in the greatest market of the world, which is the American market. But those who would charge us with selfishness in thus giving first thought to home interests would do well to consider whether their own policies in this regard are more liberal than ours.

We have established here the practice of absolute free trade throughout a great continental area of 48 States besides other possessions. It is the most widely extended application of that policy that will be found anywhere. Within this domain we have no extent and verifity of natural have an extent and variety of natural resources far beyond those of any other country.

own policies in this regard are more

Yet from our national beginnings we have sought no advantage by reason of this primacy in natural resources. Whoever wanted them was free to come here and buy our raw materials at exactly the same prices as our own people. Such staples as copper, cotton, and petroleum might have been made the basis on which to build great national monopolies Yet they have been as freely available to the industries of other countries as to our own. Under our Constitution our export trade is free of Policy of Protection At times, when I have heard criticism of our industrial policies, I have been tempted to wonder how many other peoples, endowed with the same natural wealth, the same possi bilities of maintaining something like monopoly, would have been as gen-erous with the rest of mankind as the Americans have been. Not a few among us have even been inclined to fear lest our liberality in this regard might at length leave us at a disadvantage in comparison with countries more willing to exploit their opportunities for monopoly, or less liberal with their natural resources.

Our production and manufacture of cotton afford a ready illustration. Normally, this country produces about two-thirds of the cotton crop of the world, and of our production we export commonly from 55 to 66 per cent. Our market is absolutely per cent. Our market is absolutely free to the buyers of the world. They may come here for our raw cotton take it home, turn it into fabrics and, if they are clever enough, which Not only do they have this privilege but to an impressive extent they have availed of it. We import nearly half as many yards of cotton cloth annually as we export. Moreover, our imports, particu-larly of fine goods, have increased rapidly in recent years. From 1909 1914, imports averaged only 000,000 yards annually, while in 1923 they reached 219,000,000 yards. If alled upon to defend our Americ industrial policy against critics, either domestic or foreign, we may well contrast this absolute freedom in our distribution of raw materials discriminatory systems practiced by some other countries.

Rights of Countries

If anybody desires information bout export taxes, export bountles, valorization projects, discriminatory taxation, and the like, and how these increase the cost of articles which we have to import, he may well study the policies which various countries apply to such staples as coffee, nitrates, potash, rubber, tin, pulpwood cocoa, sisal, quinine, and more than others. Each country has that right. We do not dispute it. But while our polic of tariff protection is in line the well-nigh universal rule of world, our policy of absolute free-dom in the export of raw materials or primary products is one of notable and exceptional liberality.

I do not refer to these matters with any intent of criticizing the countries whose methods differ from our own. We freely concede their right to determine their economic procedures with a view to what they believe their own best interests. But it is only fair that we should keep in mind all the justifications for policies of our own which have sometimes been unfairly criticized. This is the broad outlook the wide foundation, on which appears to rest an expanding and prosperous in-dustry. It will of course meet with temporary which, for the time being, may make it better or worse.

The experience of the textile dustry has repeatedly illustrated the fact that apparently whimsical changes of fashion or taste are liable to produce the most complicating effects upon industries. Probably you have all heard the story of the textile manufacturer who, observing at a continental race track that the most fashionable women wore the shortest skirts, promptly cabled home to his manager to prepare for a shrinkagle in demand for their

A thoroughly matter-of-fact young nan, who is an expert in one of the fovernment departments dealing Government departments dealing with textiles, tells me that 20 years ago it took nearly 10 yards of ging-ham to make a woman a dress, whereas she now manages to be thoroughly in fashion on 3½ yards. From the same authority I learn that in 1914 approximately 86 yards of these fabrics were required per capita in this country, while five years later, in 1919, only 54 yards were demanded. He attributed this impressive reduction chiefly to the changed styles in women's garments. From what I have already said, I judge that this condition is due in part to the fact that less cotton and more silk began to adorn woman-

Standardizing Fashions

I once heard a manufacturer say that if the ladies could be induced to standarize and stabilize their fashions as the men have done, half the worries and uncertainties of the tex-tile industries would be eliminated at once. Doubtless such a result would be a boon to you who are engaged in the industry: but I scarcely say that I see no method of bring-ing it about. The uncertainty and change of fashion may be difficult for you, but it no doubt relieves monotony and adds to the spice of

To these uncertainties of market there have been added uncertainties of raw cotton supply. This has been one result of the boll weevil. It is now more than 30 years since the weevil crossed our borders from Mexico. Within that period the pest has ranged over nearly our entire cotton-producing area. Its ravages have been responsible for a great re-duction in the yield of cotton per acre, and a general rise in the price.

Many proposals have been put forward for exterminating the weevil, among which it seems probable that the most effective would be to starve it out of existence by absolutely dis continuing the growth of cotton year by year, in successive zones. But there are great practical difficulties. The program would require the co-operation of the states throughout the cotton belt, and of the cotton raisers in them.

Treaty of Co-operation

A suggestion was made to a conof the cotton-growing terests three or four years ago that the foundation for such co-operation might be laid if the cotton states vould enter into a treaty among themselves pledging co-operation in executing it

There are several examples of such interstate treaties for the accombe attained by the states acting sen arately. I believe the suggestion has much of practical value, and that, if the cotton states would act upon it, they would find the national Goyernment prepared to give all possible assistance and encouragement to the growing industry will not easily be overestimated. While the value of the cotton crop is now placed below that of hay and of corn among the agricultural staples, it is by far the greatest single item in our export trade, Last year we sold abroad more than $950,000,000 worth of raw cotton. The assurance of a favorable trade balance lies in our exports of

On the manufacturing side, the our manufactures. It employs about a haif million wage earners, and turns out products valued around $2,000,000,000 annually. Of the 159,000,000,000 cotton spindles in the world, 56,000,000 are in Great Britain, while the United States with 38,000,000 occupies second place. Owing, how-ever, to the difference between the British and American fabrics, our spindles consume about twice as much raw cotton as do those of Great Britain. Sales in 1924 Gain Although there has been some-thing of depression in certain branches of the industry, a broad view suggests no serious occasion of concern about its outlook. Our imorts of cotton fabrics have increased e00,000 yards of these goods, or nearly 20 per cent more than in the pre-war years. Considering the widespresed demoralization in world markets since the war, such a showing can not reasonably be regarded as discouraging. Probably there is no industry in which conditions affecting international trade and finance are more constantly and definitely reflected than in this one. There was a measure of overproduction in cotton goods in 1923, from which the industry has not entirely recovered yet.

The excessive output of that year left a considerable surplus to be consumed thereafter. But with the gradual improvement of conditions recovered vet. throughout the world, as the war recedes further from us, we are entitled to view with increasing as-surance the outlook for business in all directions, including, of course, the great textile industry.

Sympathy and Co-operation

It is scarcely necessary to state the attitude which I desire to see the national Government assume toward all business in general and the textile industry in particular. It is that of sympathy and co-operation for every lawful effort to and our economic well-being. Modand our economic well-being. ern industry, with its great com-binations and great aggregations of both capital and employees, has nec-essarily brought many new problems for solution in our effort to work out a righteous human relationship. These new conditions made necessary new rules of conduct. Many of these have already become well established and are believed to have been productive of good. But there still exists a considerable area, sometimes designated as a twilight zone, in which the proper standard of action is as yet undetermined. The Government necessarily looks to the management of industry as mainly responsible for the conduct of industry. There ought to be a most candid understanding between the Government and all industrial effort. Due to the keenness of competition and the urgent desire for success; it is necessary to maintain the most constant watchfulness on the part of the Government to in-sure the enforcement of the law.

Support of Law

But on the part of the manage-ment there should likewise be the same vigilance to insure the ob-servance of the law. We shall never reach an ideal condition in our industrial life until the laws are voluntarily observed by our citizens without the constant and wasteful interposition of Government and court action. You men who are responsible for an industry ought to make unlawful and improper practices in that industry thoroughly unfashionable. It may seem expensive to change improper practices, but they will have to be changed in the end, and the sooner is done the less expensive it

Industry has come thoroughly to recognize its responsibility toward its employees. The Government approves of and shares in that responsibility. It regards the welfare of the wage earners with the utmost solicitude. It has come to be recog-nized almost universally that only upon justice to the wage earners of the Nation can there be reared any the Nation can there be reared any lasting prosperity. America is unwilling to nourish any system under which the rewards of human effort are not equitably distributed among all those engaged in any industry.

The great agencies of the Government are constantly at your disposal to assist and encourage you in your production and defend you in your production and defend you in your rights. The Department of Com-megce, with its various research bureaus, domestic and foreign agen-cies, is forever diligent in stimulat-ing your production, advising more efficient methods, discovering new and enlarged markets, and co-ordi-nating industrial activity.

The Federal Trade Board has been devised for the purpose of safedevised for the purpose of sate-guarding your rights, protecting you from unfair trade practices, and admonishing and correcting you if you are wrong. The Department of Labor is constantly engaged in preventing and adjusting disputes venting and adjusting disputes be-tween employer and employee, to promote justice, and avoid the great waste of interrupted operation and production. But I refrain from fur-ther specific mention of the many activities of the Government in be-half of the industrial life of the Nation

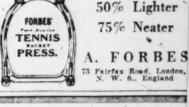

I confess that I desire to see our country prosperous. I am aware there can be no prosperity in which the textile industry does not have a generous share. I do not believe there can be any permanent pros-perity which does not rest on the everlasting foundation of justice. In the effort of the Government to promote justice, no industry 'ould promote justice, no industry out have anything to fear.

In the effort of the Government to provide constructive economy in rubilc expenditure, all industry should concur. In the effort of the Government to encourage harmony in all our domestic relations, every industry should co-operate. In the effort of the Government to secure a firmer faith of the people of the earth in each other, which will establish an indwelling peace in the heart of mankind, all industry heart of man should rejoice.

About 14,000 firms exhibited at fairs this spring, covering roughly 216,000 square meters of ground as compared with 13.300 exhibitors last autumn and 4200 in the spring of 1914, when the last fair before the war took place. The number of business people who visited the two fairs this spring is estimated at more than 150,000, of whom about more than 150,000, of whom about 9000 came from foreign countries, as compared with 120,000 visitors last autumn, of whom about 9000 were foreign business people, and with 20,000 in the spring of 1914, when only 4200 visitors came from abroad. This increase in the number of exhibitors and visitors was only made possible by the erection of new fair ouildings. Thus, for instance, in the heart of the town under the market place a new subterranean building has been built, which was opened at this spring's fair. It is 89 meters long by 45 meters broad, five meters high and has room for about 175 stands. In its red and yellow color-ring it made a very cheerful impression and proved a great attraction.

The Industrial Fair, which is located outside Leipsic at the foot of the huge monument of the Battle of Leipsic, has also been extended, and now covers a territory of about 130, 000 square meters. This fair consists of 13 large buildings and has an area of 21,000 square meters with room for about 765 stands. A large number of tool machines exhibited were

In clumps in the garden, or cut for the vases, from July until November, the large-flowered GLADIOLUS is certainly one of the finest, most useful and desirable of flowers. It has a fine range of beautiful colours—snowlest white, pale primrose, sulphur to deep yellow, salmon, orange, pinks, brightest scarlet to deepest crimson, violet, pale and dark blues; and these, the fine long spikes of widely expanded blooms strikingly enhance. The newer section—the smaller flowered PRIMULINUS, its flowers gracefully disposed at short intervals, its hooded upper petal, and its delicate shades of yellow, orange, salmon and pink, is quite distinctive and delightfully pretty. Most men know and appreciate deliciously prepared food, but few of them know anything about the cooking of it.

It is not unusual, however, while a young husband is enjoying a really delicious dish, for him to ask his wife how she makes it. It needn't be anything extraordinary to attract his attention—for instance, just a few crisp, dry, golden brown French fried potatoes.

The modern young housewife can quickly tell him that for perfect deep frying she knows nothing better than MAZOLA.

French fried potatoes cooked in MAZOLA have that delicious golden brown crispness which everyone delights in, and eggs fried in MAZOLA are of unsurpassed delicacy and tenderness—light, fluffy and crisp around the edges.

MAZOLA is a pure vegetable oil, as sweet and wholesome as the corn from which it comes. Once you fry with MAZOLA you will never go back to the old-fashioned method of frying with grease

The Kabuki Drama of Japan

Tokyo, Japan Special Correspondence LL theaters in Japan maintain their own stock companies and some of them their own dramatists. The Kabuki-za company embraces between 150 and 200 actors, all men, since this theater has not adopted the innovation of women on the stage. Among them is Utaemon, generally conceded to be the greatest living actor of Japan, although his fellow actor, Uzaemon, also ranks high. Ganjuro and Nizaemon, the two most famous players in Osaka, are loaned to the Tokyo Kabuki-za from time to time, as are also the two stars of the Imperial Theater, Koshiro and

The belief in the West that a Japanese drama lasts for hours on end is groundless, but its acceptance is easily accounted for. The theatrical performance itself begins at 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon and continues until after 10 at night. During this time, however, a series of four stage offerings have been presented, perhaps two tragedies, a farce and a dance. Intervals of 20 to 30 minutes occur between these offerings, and there are also long intervals be-tween acts, during which time the members of the audience stroll about, visit the restaurants or divert themselves in other ways which pre-vent the six to seven hours' perform-

The leadership of the Kabuki-za in Japan's dramatic field dates back to its opening on Nov. 25, 1889. Practically every famous actor of the past four decades has trod its boards, many of them as members of its regular company and others as temporary "loans" from other theaters. Danjuro the Ninth and Kikugoro the Fifth set a precedent to which Utaemon, Uzaemon and Nizaemon of

AT a meeting of the athletic letic Association, of which Albert Geiger Jr. is chairman, it was voted yesterday to withdraw from the United States Amateur Hockey Association, and the vote has been approved by H. BUFFALO, N. (Y., April 7—The twenty-fifth annual international championship tournament of the American Bowling Congress, with a record entry of 2200 five-man teams, failed to produce any record scores. Clarence Long's score of 1977 pins which won the all-events championship was the only one to beat the winning mark of last year and this by a t many friends in exalted and humble that the sour honorary secretary. It is difficult to realize what the general's unique knowledge, untiring energy, and urremitting toil for the last two when her also were the source of the substantial balance in hand. The association has also gained strength, because of the policy which your council has followed in entertaining and showing hospitality to every team which has come to the Motherland from the Dominions, and also to teams from other countries.

"Your council has been most active in this direction, and, in finding accommodation for the Dominions both in England and Paris, in providing them with training facilities, in getting them made honorary members of many clubs, and lastly in entertaining them both in Paris and in this country. All have left our shores with a sense of appreciation for all that has been done for them in Great Britain. Especially in this respect do I refer to the dinner given to the American to the dinner given to the American to the dinner given to the American taken in hone for parts to the last two years have meant to the association. We could never hope to find a successor to him in an honorary capacity, and, provided the financial situation is assured, a proposition will come before the council asking for its consent to the appointment of a paid secretary, in order not only that the work, which the wider activities of the association will embrace, may be efficiently carried out, but also that we may not lose the effects of our good work of the past.

But with this appointment is wrapt up the whole question of finance, which I have left to the last because it is, in my opinion, the most important, seeing that none of our schemes can be put in motion, or, in fact, anything on progressive lines done for them in Great Britain. Especially in this respect do I refer to the dinner given to the American rugby fifteen, to the parties given to the teams of the Dominions and of the other nations in Paris, and to the great occasion at the Piccadilly Hotel, when, through, the instrumentality of the British Olympic Association, the greatest gathering of sportsmen of the Motherland that this country has probably ever seen, assembled to do honor to the members of the New Zealand rugby fifteen, on the eve of their return to their homes. The occasion has rightly been termed historic, and the British Olympic Association can take to itself the credit for the success to itself the credit for the success which attended that function.

Wants All United by the lack of funds, and the success the lack of funds, and the success the success to carry on our activities unhampered by the lack of funds, and the success the success the success to carry on our activities unhampered by the lack of funds, and the success the success to carry on our activities unhampered by the lack of funds.

Whilst on this subject, I would like to draw your attention to the possi-bilities which lie ahead of us if, taking that historic occasion as an example of what unity and combination in sport can do, we are able to gather to our fold every one of the governing bodies of sport in this country, which exert so much power and influence over considerable sections of our population. We desire to have them with us, not We desire to have them with us, not because we wish to interfere with the sovereign power, which each severally exercises over its own sport, but in order that, if and when the situation arises—and one never knows when it will arise—when it may be necessary to call upon the governing bodies to act in the interests and on behalf of the

CORNELL NINE LOSES FIRST TEST AT CHARLOTTESVILLE

ITHACA, N. Y., April 7 (Special)—Cornell University's baseball prospects this season received its first test on the spring vacation trip yesterday. The Red and White losing to University of Virginia, 1 to 0 at Charlottesville, Va. Encouraged by the showing of pitcher J. A. Milligan '26, who pitched a no-hit game the Cornell nine will stace Virginia again today and will then journey to Lexington, Va., to play two games each with Washington and Lee and Virginia Military Institute.

Favored by better weather controlled the regular catchers last year, has the call for backstop. J. R. Greenbaum '27, of the freshman squad of a year ago, is first understudy and Arturo Romaquera '26 is also showing well.

The infield contains several experienced letter men, including F. D. Rossomondo '25, second baseman. Capt. D. F. Davis Jr. '25, shortstop, and William Wendt '25, third baseman. The leading candidates for first base are F. D. Shaw '27, of last year's freshman team, and H. K. Melniker '25, with the odds favoring Shaw. I. R. Groves

HARVARD ECONOMIC SERVICE'S OPINION ON FUTURE BUSINESS

Harvard Economic Service says: The reaction in the stock market comes at a time when corrected rates on prime commercial names be comes at a time when corrected rates on prime commercial paper have risen over 1½ per cent. Ordinarily such an advance would precede a major downward movement of industrial stock prices but at present we do not believe that it necessarily has its usual significance.

Rates last autumn were abnormally depressed so that the present advance

Rates last autumn were abnormally depressed so that the present advance is measured from an extremely low level. Moreover, this low level of ratés did not reflect the actual business situation since it did not follow a drastic liquidation of securities and business, but resulted mainly from gold imports and the open market operations of the reserve banks.

The recent recession in stock prices may be another intermediate movement like those which have occurred in the past two years. Clearly it has not been due to money stringency but has resulted rather from the eviended in the past two years. Clearly it has not been due to money stringency but has resulted rather from the extended position of the market, combined with some unsettlement of opinion arising from weakness in commodity prices and in some degree from political developments.

The prospect is for a large volume of

of this half year.

Prices Easier, With Pig Iron Weak-Foreign Competition a Factor

NEW YORK, April 7 (Special)—It was another week of waiting and hesitation in the steel trade, but with basic factors still fundamentally sound. Though there is an easier tone to prices the composite price of steel remains the same as a week ago, or 2.531 cents a pound, Pittsburgh, based on 88 per cent of the Nation's output. Production is declining, but in a gradual way. Mills in the Chicago district are at virtually 100 per cent of capacity; in the Pittsburgh district the average is 83 per cent and in the Youngstown district about 70 per cent. In view of the extraordinarily heavy shipments of the United States Steel Corporation in March it is expected that the unfilled tonnage statement will show a decline in orders for the first time in eight months. NEW YORK, April 7 (Special)-It first time in eight months.

One of the steel barometers has already been determined, that being pig iron production for March. The daily rate that month was 5000 tons greater than in January, but 1200 less than in February. There was evidently a fall-ing off toward the close of the month as indicated by the net decrease of a # dozen furnaces. Total output for March was 3,522,000 tons, compared with 3,214,143 tons in February. Imports Increasing

Other interesting statistics were those pertaining to iron and steel imports in February, as compiled by the Government. Exports were only about 10,000 tons greater than imports, the former being a trifle more than 100,000 tons. That proves the observation that exports have been waning and imports

Th largest item among exports was galvanized sheets, amounting to 15,000 tons, chiefly for shipment to South America. Fully half the imports were pig iron, the importing movement of which was at its height in February.

The Treasury Department has expressed an opinion concerning the importing of iron from Ontario, Canada, into the United States, the purport of which is that it violates the anti-dumping provision of the tariff port of which is that it violates the anti-dumping provision of the tariff. The wording follows: "After due investigation I find that the industry of manufacturing pig iron in the United States is being, or is likely to be, injured by reason of the importation into the United States of pig iron from the Province of Ontario, Canada, and that such merchandise is sold, or is likely to be sold in the United States at less its province of the United S

Trade Situation Improving Industrially the situation is improv

ng, with more extensive operation in Ontario and Quebec than at this me last year.

In the mining districts of the north an immense amount of new work is being done. The province of Ontario this year alone will spend one-half as much as provided for in the budget for the whole of the federal government 10 years ago. During March the Algoma Steel Corporation made a new monthly record for the turning out of steel rails, having 35,099 tons to its credit. The steel mill of the British Empire Corporation at Sydney is also very busy. The Cockshutt Plow Company reports a good run of orders from the west, while the Massey-Harris Company has a fair foreign demand.

Export trade keeps up remarkably well, the value of exports during the year ended February being $1,079.088-809, an increase of about $38,000.000 over that for the preceding period.

All this increase has been in sales to the United Kingdom, chiefly in Lisbon

$93,000,000. It is interesting to note that this has been almost entirely at the expense of the United States, pur-chases from which have declined to the extent of $85,000,000. This is due chiefly to the circumstance that betariff over here, American imports are subjected to much keener competition than they are at home.

ests at the head is rumored, the companies concerned being Abitibi, Keewatin, Fort Frances, Fort William, Mettagami, and Spanish River. This combination would have a combined daily output of newsprint in excess of 1200 toos.

Operating as they do largely within the same area there is between these Production, 20,000 Carats companies a community of interest that may warrant such action.

If this merger is consummated it would no doubt be followed by a getting together of companies in Quebec Evidently the feeling is growing that the only effective way to meet the competition of the International Company, after its plan of extensions is worked out, will be through corpora-tion comparable in magnitude. As in the case of some of the balata concessions, the difficulties in reaching the diamond-producing areas are very great.

Only Boat Transport

The only existing means of transportation is by boat on the Mazaruni River, in the neighborhood of which most of the diamonds are found. Owing to the numerous cataracts, the journey (which varies from 20 to 26 working days) is both tedious and hazardous. The question of inaugurating an air service is, however, under consideration.

The base of supply both for labor and foodstuffs is Georgetown, and practically all the storekeepers in the district run boats at regular intervals to convey their supplies, and they also carry passengers and freight for others. In consequence of the difficulties of navigation and the resultant high cost of transportation. prices of foodstuffs and other articles

NEW FINANCING AT RAPID RATE DURING MARCH

New financing continued at a rapid pace in March and brought the total for three months to a record high, in face of an irregular money market and declining stock prices. Business was well distributed over a broad field of bonds and notes, with an unusual amount of stock issues.

Total domestic issues of bonds, notes and stock of railroad, industrial and public utility corporations was $410,337,810, while foreign corporation issues were $43,000,000 and foreign issues were $43,000,000 and foreign government issues $13,000,000, a total f $467.037.180, compared with 027,235 in February and $288,933,100 in March, 1924.

Domestic corporation financing for three months was $1.293.182.150, compared with $933,523,045 in the corresponding period of 1924 and $1,220,-273,365 in 1923. Of this year's financing $884.642.500 was in bonds, $242. 173,490 in notes and $363,216,160 in new financing this year with $698,646,-925, industrials and miscellaneous corporations issues $615,095,485, while railroads issued $176,289,740. QUEENSLAND CONVERSION LOAN QUEENSLAND CONVERSION LOAN BRISBANE, Queensl., March 9 (Special Correspondence)—A conversion loan was successfully floated this week in London by the Queensiand Government. The amount required was £11,728,000, but this was over-subscribed many times. The rate of interest was 5 per cent with a £1 per cent premium. The money will be used for the paying off of old loans maturing on April 1.

EDITORIALS.

The appointment to the Peking mission of John van A. MacMurray, Assistant Secretary of State, calls new attention to the very intelligent handling of vacancies in high diplomatic posts by President Coolidge. Within a few weeks he has had to fill the embassies at London and Berlin and the first-class legation at Peking. The vacancies occurring immediately after his inauguration afforded tempting opportunities for the paying of political obligations. If the temptation suggested itself, it was evidently set aside.

To London was sent Alanson B. Houghton, whose service at Berlin has been marked by notable tact and efficiency. If he has impressed himself little upon the American people, it is because of a notable self-restraint, bordering upon taciturnity. This quality, which perhaps evoked a certain fellow feeling in President Coolidge, will be difficult of manifestation at the Court of St. James's, where, by a long line of precedents, the American Ambassador has come to be regarded as a sort of "Old Faithful" geyser of Anglo-American amity. Doubtless Ambassador Houghton will rise to the oratorical needs of the most talkative post in the whole diplomatic establishment, but his record suggests that he will say nothing that were

To succeed Mr. Houghton, at Berlin, the President sent, not a politician, but an educator and trained diplomatist, Jacob Gould Schurman, president of the first Philippine Commission, Minister to Athens, and, latterly, Minister to Peking. Dr. Schurman has had ample opportunity to absorb diplomatic traditions and to manifest his diplomatic qualities. He goes to a Berlin very different in its standards and demands from the imperial court which, under the former Kaiser, turned the cold shoulder upon an American Ambassador because he was a college professor and obliged to live upon his salary.

Berlin today yields to no other diplomatic post in point of importance and of interest. Germany has shown itself indomitably democratic. In the recent election Von Ludendorff, standing as the candidate of the forces of reaction and imperialism, polled an insignificant vote. The German people have resolutely turned their backs upon reactionary plotters, have stabilized their currency and have taken up the task of economic reconstruction in a fashion that is commanding the admiration—though not the emulation—of continental Europe. The American Ambassador can be a helpful factor in the reestablishment of German credit throughout the China has a central government to which envoys may be accredited, but which frequently fails of authority at home. Torn by civil war, fought in the main by mercenaries indifferent to the cause they served, without control of its own revenues. China presents to the diplomatist an ever-recurring problem. The President's appointee is a veteran in service within the State Department and in the field. He has served as secretary of legation at Peking and counselor at Tokyo. For the last five years he has been chief of the Department of Far Eastern Affairs in the Department of State. His politics? Nobody knows. The appointment is one more in the series that seem to have barred the door of the diplomatic service to the partisan politician.

It is reported that a vacancy is soon to arise in the Embassy to Madrid. The resignation of the present incumbent, Alexander P. Moore, is foreshadowed in apparently authoritative dispatches. Although not of the diplomatic profession, Mr. Moore has been a successful representative of the United States at the most conservative and aristocratic court of Europe. Diplomatists shudder at the tales of his unconventional sayings and deeds, yet observers declare that his very naïveté has opened doors to him in Madrid closed against more discreet envoys. His lack of professional austerity is said to have appealed to a court and a people very tenacious of forms among themselves.

It will be interesting to see how President Coolidge will replace Mr. Moore. If the recent record is followed, a professional diplomatist will be sent to Madrid. Doubtless that is in the line of orderly development of the service. Even though we must admit that divine Providence has favored the United States by usually having an able diplomatist at every vital point in times of stress, it is high time that the Nation stopped taking chances with politicians in posts that only men trained in international affairs can efficiently fill.

In what was really an auxiliary proceeding in which the right of the Health Department of the city of New York to select a large number of appointees without warrant or authority under the civil service law or the rules of the Municipal Civil Service Commission for the alleged purpose of meeting a threatened epidemic, additional light was thrown upon the alleged methods of medical doctors and their organizations in manufacturing epidemic scares. In this particular case it was pointed out that 169 persons were added to the Health Department's pay roll, at an approximate annual cost of $200,000 to the taxpayers of the city, upon the recommendation of the Health Commissioner, who declared the country was threatened with an epidemic of all manner of so-called communicable dis-

Many of these employees, selected without particular reference to their qualifications from a medical standpoint, were assigned to the public schools, where they proceeded to inflict upon all pupils whose parents did not protest, noxious injections of toxin-antitoxin and other serums of greater or less potential harmfulness. And this in face of the fact, apparently well established by statisticians, that an average of more than 99 per cent of the children would not have acquired the disease which it was claimed measures were being taken to prevent, and in absence of any conclusive proof that the injections will prevent the disease in any case.

The fact was established at the hearing of the case that no such epidemic as that advertised existed at the time of the appointment of these employees, and that although their tenure was continued from time to time under the repeated threat of disaster, it was necessary finally to resort to a new alarm, in no way connected with the original scare, in order to keep the beneficiaries on the pay roll for a little

The bulletin of the Citizens' Medical Reference Bureau takes occasion to contrast the methods of the New York Health Department with that of Chicago in dealing with so-called epidemics or threatened epidemics. It quotes as follows from a recent bulletin issued by the Chicago Health Department:

Of all the instincts to which human beings are heir, fear is one of the most common, most compelling, and most disturbing in its results, both mentally and

Millions of people the world over are learning how it is possible to protect themselves against this mesmerism of fear. Those who have learned the lesson best realize that this protection is not afforded by serums and antitoxins, but by a realization of man's absolute freedom from the maladies which medical doctors prescribe for their prevention. It has been attempted to forestall the enforced application of these so-called preventives by just such precautions as the people of New York supposed they had taken to insure a measure of efficiency in their health department. But every law was overridden, apparently, in the disregard of reasonable civil service regulations and the rules prescribed for the selection and appointment of public agents. The only excuse for this circumvention of the law was the alleged epidemic of contagion which did not materialize, and which even health department statistics indicate would not have materialized in any

To a person who has not been interested in athletic sports, either from the viewpoint of a

Sports and International Relations

contestant or a spectator, it no doubt seemed strange that such an organization as the Foreign Policy Association should have taken up as the topic of discussion at one of its meetings the subject of sport as a factor in international relations. On the other hand, to those who have followed the progress of sports throughout the world during the past years, and especially since the World War, the selection of this topic appeared as the most natural thing possible. That it proved to be a topic well worth while must have been the verdict of those who attended the meeting at the Hotel Copley-Plaza in Boston recently.

World peace and the bettering of international relations between all the peoples of the world are questions which have received much attention in the English-speaking countries. Few indeed are the individuals or nations which do not sincerely want to see the Golden Rule practiced throughout the world. Leaders in every line of human endeavor have for years worked for this end, and that much progress has been made cannot be questioned. Despite the World War and its after effects, the relations between the various nations at the present time are probably far better than they have ever been before. That they have not yet been brought to as high a standard as is desired or easily possible is equally true.

In times past diplomacy has seemed to be the chief agency through which the nations have worked for international betterment. Much has been accomplished in this way, so far as the leaders of nations have been concerned; but it has not accomplished as much with the peoples of the various nations, and in the final analysis it is these very people who must be reached before international relations shall attain their International sport is not a new thing. Over fifty years ago citizens from different countries met in friendly athletic rivalry, although in those early events only two nations were represented. With the renewal of the Olympic Games at Athens in 1896, sports brought together on one field representatives from several nations. And from then up to the present time there has been a constantly increasing field for international sports, until now there is hardly a nation in the world which does not at some time or other during an Olympiad face representatives from most of the other nations on the sporting field. The Olympic Games, the Henley Royal Regatta, the Davis Cup for lawn tennis, the Westchester Cup for pony polo, the various vachting trophies and national championships are some of the events which bring the athletes of various nations face to face. Those persons who have taken part in these competitions have for a long time noted their effects upon the public of the countries in which they have been held. While it is only natural that differences have arisen in the course of keen rivalry, these have generally been caused by what Prof. W. M. Sloane of Princeton, N. J., calls "the pernicious passion for nationalism," and which he regards as "the worst single influence on the face of the globe." They have always been of short duration, however, and have never tended to lessen the desire for international sport on the part of the contestants or their nations. Bringing together peoples of different nations. tongues, ambitions and beliefs, is a difficult problem, especially as there are few things which they all have in common. But no matter how different they may be in other respects, they all have certain forms of play which appeal to the masses. A number of these sports are peculiar to their own people, but practically all of the great nations have some in common, and it is in these, such as association football, rowing, lawn tennis, swimming, and track and field sports, that representatives have come together from all parts of the world.

There are now many persons who believe that sports furnish a splendid medium through which to better international relations; but they also realize that, if this is to be accomplished, those having the affairs of sporting activities in charge must see that they are properly conducted. The International Olympic Committee is today the biggest organization in world-sporting activities, and it is expected that at its next meeting, early this summer, much will be accomplished in the way of standardizing the various games and putting them on a higher plane, from which they may do even more toward bettering international relations than they have achieved in the past. It is hardly to be expected that sports alone can accomplish the desired results, but that they can be of great help, when employed along with other means, there is no doubt.

Admittedly as a partial concession to a request by the Federation of Women's Clubs, the

Segregating

the News

of Crime

Des Moines Register. published at the capital of the State of Iowa, has inaugurated for the present week what it refers to as a segregated crime news test. It explains that, while its policy will be, for the period named, neither to curtail nor diminish the amount of crime news published, it will confine such publication to its inside pages, grouping all items of this nature for the purpose of separating them from the general run of local and telegraphic news. The concession is an encouraging and significant one, despite the fact that the experiment might have been made more satisfactory and conclusive had it been decided to eliminate all news of crime for a given period. The step, however, is in the right direction, and it is reasonable to expect that the results will be as gratifying to the editor and publishers of the Register as to its readers and the public generally. It should be encouraging to the progressive women who are members of the clubs which have exerted this influence upon so representative a newspaper to be assured that their counsel has been heeded. The matter in which they have displayed so great an interest is one of vital and continuing importance to the public generally.

Many of the sincere defenders of the theory that crime publicity operates as a crime deterrent, have been convinced that the effect is exactly opposite. Too often, in actual experience, has it been shown that suggestion incites to acts of violence. It has seldom been made to appear that the vicious are dissuaded from their course by the gratuitous advertising given to the criminal acts of their fellows.

Probably a week is too short a time in which to prove, to the satisfaction of a newspaper counting room, the success or the apparent failure of the plan. But it is safe to say that the willingness to try the experiment will be commended by many of the paper's readers. It is doubtful if any of them will feel inclined to complain that they have been denied the privilege of enjoying their daily first-page thrills.

It would be interesting to observe the results of a similar experiment tried simultaneously by leading newspapers in all the cities of the United States. Possibly concerted effort on the part of the club women, directed by the national organization, might induce a general experiment along the line being followed in Des Moines. It is by such demonstrations of practical methods of dealing with recognized wrong tendencies that needed reforms are instituted and finally realized. The way to suppress an evil tendency, or to destroy a demoralizing influence, is to put something good in its place. There is plenty of good news to fill all the first pages of all the newspapers.

Editorial Notes

Tragic is a mild word to use as descriptive of a confession-not, doubtless, intended as such-which was tacitly made in the New York World recently in an article entitled, "X-Ray Aids Fight on Tuberculosis." This article was published under a few lines in italics reading: This is the third of a series of articles describing the effort of science to find a cure for tuberculosis by combing the brains and ability of its ablest men in a general attack on the disease." And this is the "confession":

A few years ago an X-ray photograph of the lung nearly always showed spots, or shadows, which medical men presumed meant tuberculosis. Thousands of persons with spots on their lungs were rushed to sanitariums.

Thousands of members of the familles of these patients went through anguish-as did the patient himself. In cases of the poor, homes were broken up and sold to raise money for treatment. There was untold mental

Now, primarily as a result of the research committee (of the National Tuberculosis Association), science knows that in many cases these shadows were caused by whooping cough, or just bad colds. It wasn't tuberculosis at all, in many cases, and the breaking up of homes and the worry was unnecessary.

Not long since several men, who are engaged in the business of manufacturing locomotives, were riding on a train from somewhere to somewhere, when one of them-it happened to be the president of the locomotive workssuggested that they all agree not to drink anything spirituous for a year. No sooner was the suggestion made than it was acted upon. In commenting on the incident the Villager said: "And how do you suppose it was done? They 'swore off?' They 'signed the pledge?' These are the manners of yesterday! No, these gentlemen drew up a contract not to drink for a year, a legal paper, had it attested and all, and stipulated that a breach of the contract would entail a $10,000 forfeit." The Villager comments on this incident by urging that it shows that "this is an age of utilitarian purposes. These twentieth-century teetotallers children of the New Age." Maybe it is furnishing the correct interpretation. But really it makes but little difference. The fact that the occurrence happened is all that is really

"There Grows a Bonnie Brier Bush"

Curiously enough, the man from whose writings sprang the Kailyard School is the only one of the group who has survived the vicissitudes through which it has passed, and that man is Sir James M. Barrie. He has left the school far behind, and just as far the kailyard, for his later works are expressed in classic English and no longer bear the character that inspired a bounteous crop of imitators. The school had its beginning in the "Auld Licht Idylls" and "The Window in Thrums," both of which gave intimate glimpses into Scottish life and character, accentuating the pathos and humor of the little town of The success of these sketches budding authors to try the "kailyard" style of writing, and it became the vogue not only in the Scottish tongue but in English also, where the sentiment of the fireside made a strong appeal.

Apart from Barrie, the most notable member of the Kallyard School was perhaps Ian Maclaren. Maclaren published "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush" in 1893, about five years after the "Auld Licht Idylls" appeared. It was an immediate success. It had its origin in the old song so familiar to Scotsmen, "There Grows a Bonnie Brier Bush in Oor Kailyard," a song of which Dr. John Watson—for Ian Maclaren was but a pen name—was very fond.

The title was chosen "because the suggestion of the book is that in every garden, however small and humble, you may have a flower. . . . This is the whole idea of my writing, to show the rose in places where many peo-. This is the whole idea of ple look only for cabbages."

Although born in Essex, he constantly displayed the strong veln of romance and melancholy of the Highlander. His school days were spent in Perth, and he made frequent excursions to Craigie Knowes and "Woody Island." Kinnoull Hill was a welcome sight to him, as it is to all who visit the Fair City. Who can forget the panorama seen from the crest of the hill—the Tay threading its silver course through the fertile Carse o' Gowrie and the shores of Fife wooded and green-or the view from the banks of the river of the fir-clad brow of the precipitous rocks, with the crumbling ruins of an old castle standing through centuries against the onslaught of wind and weather?

Maclaren knew the South Inch as a man knows the scenes of his childhood, for there he played games as a boy. And he knew the North Inch, that extensive play ground carpeted with grass and enriched by the swiftrunning waters of the river over which rowboats ply summer and salmon leap in the sun. He knew the cattle market, to which farmers come from all directions, for Perth is noted for its sales of pedigree stock; and he undoubtedly heard the auctioneer keep the ring of dealers in good humor while disposing of sheep and cattle in lots of varied size

Walks and drives into the surrounding country gave Maclaren material for his books. He trudged through the sparsely settled valleys of Glenisla, difficult of access before the motorcar opened up the countryside, climbed knee-deep in heather to the summit of Mount Blair, from which the wild grandeur of the Highlands can be seen at its best.

It has been said that Muirtown, which he frequently mentions, is none other than Perth; and to no better city, situated as it is at the base of the Grampians Scotland's proudest range-with its enchanting retreats and diversified scenery, could he have looked for in-but abandoned the ministry to devote his time to writing. His first successful venture, "The Stickit Minister," contained intimate sketches in the Scottish dialect and delightful pages of description about his native Galloway.

He worshiped at the shrine of Robert Louis Stevenson, and dedicated his first book to his countryman. Yet he showed a closer literary kinship to Barrie in de lineating the character and presenting the customs, in more or less idealized form, of his native shire. He was a patriot, a conservative patriot, one might say, and his "Raiderland" shows that his patriotism was confined within narrow limits. Yet his tastes were catholic and his love for his neighbor boundless.

Crockett, like Ian Maclaren, came in on the crest of the Thrums wave, and shared the popularity which it brought to Scottish literature. Had the idylls of Barrie succeeded rather than preceded the tales of these men it is difficult to say what might have been the course of Barrie found a publisher for his first book only after many disappointments. Scottish literature was a venture, and no one seemed willing to take the risk that the idylls involved. Hence they were rejected, time after time.

In "Margaret Ogilvy" Barrie tells the story of his early struggles, his perseverance and eventual success. In discussing his efforts to place his first book he remarks that no well-known magazine would print an article or story about the poor of his native land, and, he says, "the publishers, Scotch and English, refused to accept the book as a gift. I was willing to present it to them, but they would have it in no guise; there seemed to be a blight on everything that was Scotch."

At last a publisher was found. "He was an editor, and had as large a part in making me a writer of books as the other (his mother) in determining what the books should be about."

Yet the idylls signalized the beginning of a career that was to carry their author to the highest pinnacle of his profession. They revived interest in "the simple annals of the poor" and started a vogue in Scottish character sketches which made ink flow in every direction and brought to the surface a group of writers, of varying degrees of talent, which W. E. Henley dubbed the Kail-

The kailyard is now forsaken and the school deserted. Thrums, which is acknowledged to have been the foundation stone of the structure, rests upon its laurels, and he who conceived the idea of designating the shuttleclicking town of Kirriemuir by the name given to the end of a weaver's thread was just as much surprised to find a world-public thirst for the intimate tales of village folk as were the readers to whom he addressed

Barrie bade farewell to the Kailvard School and settled in London as a playwright. His versatility in literature is almost beyond compare, for he is just as much at home in the circles of society as in the abodes of the poor, as appreciative of the simplicity of children as of the wisdom of the sage. Before he entered the field of drama he made the daring statement that there never was a better opportunity for playwriting—that the plums were there for the picking-and later he proved his contention by producing plays of such merit that they ran three at a time in the playhouses of a great city.

Such renown have the works of Barrie, Maclaren and Crockett gained, not to mention the names of lesser lights in the Kailyard School, that it is no longer necessary to talk of bribing an editor with a box of shortwas S. R. Crockett. He was a minister by profession, bread to open magazine pages to things Scottish.

The World's Great Capitals: The Week in Paris

General Nollet has deposited a plan for the reorganization of the French Army, which is eagerly awaited. provides for a reduction of military service, which is now eighteen months, accompanied by increased rapidity of mobilization. The recruits are first trained in instructional units, afterward in maneuver units, which will also discharge such peace duties as guarding the The entire system has been drastically overhauled. When the whole plan is revealed it will be seen that an attempt is being made to provide for an appropriate distribution of the necessary tasks in time of war over all the members of the community:

The horse is vanishing, not only from the congested Paris streets but even from the Bois de Boulogne. It is not surprising that few people look with a kindly eye upon the old fiscres with their nicturesque cochers ing for hire on the boulevards. It would indeed be somewhat absurd in ordinary circumstances to take a horsedriven vehicle when the streets are filled with automobile taxicabs. But if one wanted to take a drive in the Boulogne it was preferable to hire a fiacre. Gradually, however, the horse vehicles are disappearing, and now it is to be observed that even the riders in the Bois are becoming fewer and fewer.

Another feature of Paris life is also vanishing—the itinerant singer, whose place is being taken by wireless concerts. Before the war, and even in the years immediately following it, Paris was enlivened by more or less musical strains: almost every courtyard was, at some part of the day, converted into a concert hall. Often the singing was of some quality, and in any case the singer, breaking the daily monotonous round, was welcomed and was rewarded with coppers thrown from every window. were also extremely creditable performers on various instruments who made a fair living. But now these musicians are rare. Landlords and concierges are not as indulgent as they used to be, and with concerts radiocast from the Tour Eiffel and from other the Parisian who stays at home is well supplied with

The Pont Neuf, which, in spite of its name, is one of the oldest of the bridges in Paris, is to be beautified. The bridge itself is already one of the most attractive of those which span the Seine, but the streets at either end are undoubtedly ugly. Particularly on the south side, old houses have been demolished, and there are heaps of rubbish and the bare ends of buildings which constitute an offense to the sight. Always intent upon the artistic development of the city, the authorities are now proceeding with plans to lay out these vacant spaces as gardens. It is also hoped to widen the narrow Rue Dauphine. On the northern side, the open space about the Quai du Louvre is to be enlarged. hoped, the old Pont Neuf will be set off to much greater

The precise character of the book which M. Clemenceau has just finished is not disclosed. He has told some hat it was a long philosophical work, but others declare that they understand that, although the tone is elevated the volumes are really a record of M. Clemenceau's own life. It is curious that he should have insisted that the three volumes of 500 pages each, which his book will make, must not be published until ten years after a date which is unfixed, but which is likely to be remote. is certain is, that M. Clemenceau has put into this work the best that is in him. It is the fruit of many years of meditation and of activity.

It is on the P. L. M. (Paris-Lyons-Mediterranean) line that the most powerful locomotive in Europe is now operating. It is a formidable monster of 2500 horsenower t weighs eighty tons and is 161/2 meters long. Its boiler has five square meters of surface.

More and more is the system of open-air exhibitions of pictures catching on. Among the numerous invitations recently issued to visit exhibitions of artists' work in Paris there is one which is original in that it does not mention any known art gallery, but reads as follows: "The painter . . . asks you to visit his stand at the out-door picture fair which will be held Place Constanting Pecqueur, on Saturday next and on Sunday. Nearest station-Lamarck on the Nord-Sud: omnibus La Vilette The invitation is decorated by the silhouette of the painter. The most sumptuous and costly art gallery could not have announced more attractively to persons interested in the arts an exhibition than has this artist who is among those who have resolved to dispense with the intermediary of professional dealers

4 The cost of living in Paris has again risen and is more than five times that of the prewar figures, according to the statistics compiled by the Government service.

These statistics apply to forty-five commodities. Taking the index number for July, 1914, as 100, the number for last December is 518, and for January of this year 525. The tendency is perpetually upward, and the efforts of the Government to redeem its electoral promises in this respect seem doomed to failure.

Even in the venerable precincts of Notre Dame loudspeakers have been introduced, and the big trumpetlike appliances strike an incongruous note against the gigantic Gothic pillars. That they are necessary can hardly be denied, for the Paris cathedral can contain no fewer than 20,000 persons. Loudspeakers are now being employed everywhere. They were recently placed in the Institut on the occasion of the reception of Mattre Henri Robert, the most distinguished of the French advocates. and whenever politicians deliver speeches the loudspeakers are in evidence.

At the Grenoble Electric Power Exposition, which is shortly to be held, the American Chamber of Commerce in France is to play a prominent part. A special meeting of the board of directors has just been held, at which I was announced that Chester Lloyd Jones, the commercial attaché at the American Embassy in Paris, has been appointed the United States official representative at Grenoble. Thus there is official sanction, and the local chamber, which has taken upon itself the financial responsibility, is circularizing its members to persuade them to be represented as fully as possible at Grenoble.

The aggregate of American teachers and students visiting Europe during the summer will be larger than ever, according to the information available here. A number of tours are being organized, each of which will cover sixty-seven days. They are at exceptionally low rates. Some of the parties will go to the universities of Munich and of Grenoble to take special courses; others will visit the universities at Heidelberg, Prague, Vienna, Oxford and Cambridge. Geological students will be taken through the Valley of the Rhone to the Swiss mountains, and along the coasts of England and Holland. Those interested in architecture will tour southern France, Italy and the isles of Greece. Literary and artistic subjects will be studied. Nor will industrial conditions and economics be forgotten. There is, of course, no compulsion to take the educational courses, and those who do not wish to do so will participate in a general sight-seeing tour.

The Ebb and Tide of Mass Movement To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Of course, there is only one truth about anything, and if we poor mortals could see it as God sees it, there would be no controversies. Nothing so proves our finite limitations and the need of tolerance toward each other as the way in which we disagree about politics, religion, and everything else. Not only do we disagree among ourselves, but we seem unable to agree long with ourselves. To illustrate: During the World War, Lodge, Roosevelt, Harding, Coolidge, Moses, Knox and about everybody were agreed that when the war was over there should be a League of Nations to safeguard the world against another such catastrophe. Accordingly, a League was organized to which fifty-four nations have subscribed: but then America, which had been foremost in advocacy of a league, turned about, invoked Washington's "Fare-

The psychology of such mass movements and countermovements is an interesting study. We do not like to think that such landslides, first one way and then the other, are the result of instability of mind and character, for, if so, we should despair of the Republic. We prefer to believe that, like the ebb and flow of the tide. these great movements and counter-movements which so irreconcilable and contradictory, serve some great purpose, and that in the end the Republic will be stronger and more enduring because of them.
